

Edward Keating/The New York Times

Capt. Vincent J. Heintz, left, and First Sgt. John Brett of the New York National Guard search the looted Tourneau store below 5 World Trade Center for evidence. Looters picked through watches there.

Copyright 2001 The New York Times Company

Edward Keating/The New York Times

Subterranean passageways somehow survived the collapse of the twin towers. A New York National Guard unit discovered that stores there had been looted, apparently soon after fires had been extinguished on the upper floors.

Copyright 2001 The New York Times Company

A Cartier display at the Tourneau boutique in the retail concourse. Two men have been charged with stealing watches at the shop.

Edward Keating/The New York Times

Copyright 2001 The New York Times Company

Edward Keating/The New York Times

Investigators checking for signs of looting at the Sbarro's pizza restaurant under 5 World Trade Center. Officials say looters were active in underground shops from the day of the attack through this Wednesday.

Copyright 2001 The New York Times Company

Someone tried to pry open a cash drawer in the concourse. The looting "was done with crowbars and heavy equipment," an officer said.

Edward Keating/The New York Times

Copyright 2001 The New York Times Company